RECOVERING THE BODIES.

THE VICTIMS OF THE SUNDAY WRECK IDENTIFIED.

Five of the Laborers of the Construction Train Still Missing and Supposed to Be Buried in the Sands of the Case-de Lone Silica Furnace Dungeon in Here Some Miles South of the Southwestern Point Connolly Does Nothing Further Than Send Dispatches.

PORTER, Ind., July 28.—(Special.)—The work of removing the wreck at Dunnville was resumed at 6 o'clock today and is not yet completed, there still being five bodies in the mass of splintered cars. It is asserted now that the accident was due to negligence on the part of the section hands. A considerable train load were evidently carried Saturday for several men having said for the convenience of the road. The section hands for that part of the road were engaged in burying sands and rubbish over a bridge a mile and a half west of Dunnville. This bridge caught fire and, fearing the bridge was going to be destroyed, the section men sent word for the construction train to come to their aid. The train was backed back at a good speed, with the engine in the rear and the caboose and work cars ahead. The bridge, where the accident occurred, Saturday, the regular freight train, No. 72, which left Hammond at 11:30, had reached Dunnville and was stopped by the flagman. What does seem to be the case is that the bridge was safe and the train was due to its way to the next station. The engineer was not expected to extinguishing the fire and seeing the bridge before other trains arrived, but had not well went to the construction train, which was on its way down. The engine was jumped from the track and the cars piled on top of it. The work of rescue was begun at once, and the dead and injured were taken out. The injured were taken to the hospital at Porter, and the dead were brought to this place. The following are the dead:

Peter Kelly, Chicago, aged 40, married.
Thomas Kelly, Chicago, aged 40, married.
Thomas Kelly, Chicago, aged 40, married.

THE INVITATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Belief that He Will Accept—The Appointment of Sub-Committees.

The Committee of One Hundred appointed by Mayor Boche to invite President Cleveland to Chicago is rapidly perfecting its arrangements. The gentlemen are all confident that the President will accept the invitation, and he will be accompanied to a dinner that will do credit to the city. The program that the Mayor would have selected, and representing the widest variety of interests. Several of the original promoters of the movement called on the Mayor yesterday and advised him to have the Committee of One Hundred appoint sub-committees to attend to various details of the entertainment. Boards are among those who were in the conference with the Mayor. The sub-committees will be appointed by the Executive Committee, which will meet this afternoon. The sub-committees are as follows:

[illegible] Gage, Lyman J. Gage, Potter Palmer, Marshall Field, Levi Z. Leiter, Wirt Dexter, Franklin MacVeagh, Edward Lauterbach, Thomas B. Bryan, Charles L. Hutchinson, Martin A. Dealings at the principal cities of the United States yesterday were as follows:

New York exchange was quoted as follows: [illegible]

The amount of money in the city yesterday was not materially below the average. Leading bankers at present take small supply of currency from the banks for the harvests, and they look for an amount of this to be held back in the interior, pending the grain crops in from the fields. There were comparatively few applications for loans of Eastern funds, and in such cases as if the collateral offered for regular credit be ample, no difficulty is found in securing the money. As to loans for speculative purposes, they are not wanted by men who have themselves been burned by speculation. They have had enough fingers. Owing to this general condition, in the interest rates of the banks are not below investments in domestic securities, and funds are going out to a considerable extent for that object. The merchants are the best customers of the banks these days. Leading bankers of Philadelphia report the demand for loans from merchants in the Eastern States, Southern and Western States as very good, and the rates of interest are firm. The banks of Boston report a fair demand for loans, and the rates of interest are firm. The merchants are the best customers of the banks these days.
